Processing Note:

The collection is in generally good condition. Many of the clippings are brittle and frail; however, photocopies of most are available. Some of Lee's drawings are on tracing paper, which has become brittle. Most of the other original works are in good condition, with the exception of some tape damage. The handkerchiefs have water staining. While many of the photographs are kept in protective sleeves, some photos are loose and the handler should take extra care with these photos.

The collection is contained in 29 boxes, which are located in the Library and Research Center. An inventory of the first portion of the collection was prepared by Jennifer Meagher on January 22, 1991. The collection was processed and a finding aid was created in 1998 by Deborah Phillips, Lindsay King, and Barbara Scheuermann. In 2006 the collection was reprocessed and the finding aid was edited and rewritten to conform to DACS standard. The collection was separated into nine series and re-housed in appropriately sized acid-free folders. Patrick Brown constructed protective enclosures for the flat materials. Elizabeth Beckman edited and updated the finding aid in December 2013 to reflect changes to the collection's box inventory. In July 2018 the collection was divided into ten series and certain materials were re-housed for better preservation and organization. Shannon Neal also edited and updated the finding aid in July 2018 to reflect those changes to the collection's box inventory.

Biographical Note

Doris Lee, née Doris Elizabeth Emrick, was born on February 1, 1905 in Aledo, Illinois. Her father, E.E. Emrick, was a merchant and banker. Her mother, Nancy Emrick, was a schoolteacher. The fourth of six daughters, Lee grew up amid an extended family that included her two great-grandmothers, grandmothers, aunts, uncles and cousins. In a note written in 1945, Lee recalls how these relatives nurtured her interest in art. "[They] were always making things...painting pictures...carving frames, quilting, building furniture and nursing a great variety of plants and flowers."

In 1927, Lee graduated from Rockford College in Wake Forest, Illinois, majoring in art and philosophy. Upon graduation, she married Russell Werner Lee, an engineer who later became a noted photographer with the Farm Security Administration. Lee studied painting during their honeymoon year abroad in Italy and France. She enrolled in the Kansas City

Arts Institute in 1929 to study painting under Ernest Lawson. The following year, she studied under Arnold Blanch at the San Francisco School of Art. Blanch would become Lee's second husband after she divorced Russell Lee in 1939.

During the 1930s, Lee worked in her New York studio on East 14th Street. She also spent time in Woodstock, New York, where she soon settled permanently. In 1935, her painting Thanksgiving won the prestigious Logan Prize at the Chicago Art Institute. The award brought immediate and controversial attention. While many critics found the painting's subject provincial and cartoon-like, it was hugely popular with the public. A Depression-era audience responded to Thanksgiving's nostalgic depiction of simpler, happier times.

Only days after receiving the Logan Prize, Lee was awarded a commission from the United States Department of the Treasury to paint two murals for the General Post Office in Washington, D.C. (now the Ariel Rios Federal Building, which houses the Environmental Protection Agency). As part of the Works Projects Administration, Lee also painted a mural for the Post Office in Summerville, Georgia. In the years following, Lee's paintings of rural America were included in annual exhibitions at the Carnegie Institute. Her painting Catastrophe was purchased by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in 1937. The artist also exhibited regularly at the Walker Gallery in New York.

During the late 1940s and early 1950s, Lee undertook several commissions for Life magazine, including travel articles and illustrations that took her to such faraway locales as North Africa, Cuba and Mexico. The sketchbooks from these trips are part of this collection. Trips to Hollywood in 1944 and 1945 for Life resulted in a series of paintings for two movies: The Harvey Girls, and Oklahoma. Lee also did illustrations for other magazines, including those published by Standard Oil and Abbott Laboratories, a pharmaceutical company. Lee also undertook several book projects at this time including illustrations for The Rodgers and Hart Songbook and children's books such as James Thurber's The Great Quillow. Greeting cards, calendars, menus, pottery and fabric design also featured Lee's work.

Together, Lee and Arnold Blanch devoted many years to teaching at colleges and universities around the nation such as the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center and the University of Hawaii. In 1955, the couple published their own book, Painting for Enjoyment.

In 1968, Lee was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease. Over the next fifteen years, she continued to produce art although her health steadily declined. She died on June 16, 1983. One year after her death, the Woodstock Art Association mounted a retrospective exhibition of Lee's work.

Series 1, Photographs, includes 1,023 prints and 514 slides (an earlier container list mentions an additional sleeve of slides, which appears to be missing). About half of the prints are photos of Lee, her family, and friends. Other photos are reproductions of Lee's artwork and a few photographs Lee used for reference, including pictures of farms, cows, and people.

Series 2, Periodicals and Newspaper Clippings, contains periodicals and clippings that feature Lee's work. Lee appeared in numerous national and international publications including Life, Charm, Lamp, and Famous Artists Magazine. Both illustrations by Lee and features on Lee can be found in this series. Often in this series both copies of the articles and illustrations appear as clippings and in their original bound context.

Series 3, Printed Matter, contains reproductions of Lee's work that appear on everyday items such as calendars and playing cards. Those types of objects, along with exhibition programs and other ephemera are kept in this series

Series 4, Sketches, houses original works by Lee. The sketches appear on loose papers, in sketchbooks, on tracing paper, on thicker acetate-like translucent plastic sheets, and on illustration board. Figural studies, sketches from travels, drafts for magazine illustrations and other non-book commissions make up most of the subject matter of the sketches. Many of the sketchbooks include handwritten notes by Lee concerning her art.

Series 5, Book Projects, contains materials related to the books for which Lee created illustrations. Papers sent from the publisher, such as mock-ups of the books and copies of the text Lee was to illustrate, are also included. Original work by Lee in this series includes sketches, color drafts, and tracings for transfers of the illustrations. Published copies of the books were removed and added to the NMWA Library's Rare Books Collection in December 2013 for preservation purposes.

Series 6, Source Materials, consists of hundreds of clippings, postcards, and photographs Lee gathered for reference in her work. 1,716 objects comprise this series. Clippings of people, animals, and places were taken from many sources, including popular magazines, specialized journals for livestock, and hundreds of postcards.

Series 7, Correspondence, includes both personal and professional letters, postcards, and holiday cards sent to Lee and Arnold Blanch. Friends and family sent 203 postcards to Lee from all parts of the globe. The letters in this series are both personal and professional and are arranged by the correspondent.

Series 8, Awards, consists of honorary degrees and other awards of distinction given to Lee between 1943 and 1977.

Series 9, Financial, Legal, and Personal Documents, contains a variety of personal material from Lee. Royalty statements for book illustrations, bills, checks, and investment statements make up the bulk of the series. Personal financial records concentrate on the year 1968. Other personal documents such as an identity card, two passports, and the Mexican divorce papers for Lee's 1939 divorce from Russell Lee are included. Biographical sketches, a commencement speech, and a few other writings by Lee are included in this series. Also in this series are address books and guest books.

Series 10, Textiles, consists of 22 handkerchiefs and 3 patterned fabric swaths. The handkerchiefs may or may not have been used as reference materials for Lee. Several of the handkerchiefs are embroidered with "Doris Lee," suggesting they were used as personal effects.
